It is the sensory channel by which we are connected to other people, warned of impending dangers, and entertained by music and laughter. Good hearing enables us to perceive the laughter of friends, the cries of a baby, and the breeze rustling through the trees. Without it, we feel isolated from the world around us and frustrated by our inability to fully understand the flurry of activity that surrounds us. Man is a social creature, and hearing is critical to his ability to function as such. Hearing loss is a widespread problem. More than 36 million people in the United States have some degree of hearing impairment, making it the third most common health problem in the U.S. While the prevalence of hearing loss increases with age, it is not merely a problem of the elderly. Two or three out of every 1,000 children born in the U.S. are deaf or hard-of-hearing. Approximately 8 percent of children under age 18 have an educationally-significant hearing loss. Among adults, 18 percent of persons 45-64 years old have...
