Excerpt: .friends gave him money and he tried to filibuster aga-1n e nd landed in Truxillo, Honduras, where he issued a proc1a1netion against the government. He was forced to surrender to the cornmand of the British ship, Icarus, in 1860, and was turned over to the Honduran authorities, tried by court martial afffl shot. His photograph is very unlike his historical portrait, 1115 manners were very quiet, he had gray eyes, fair hair, was short and thin and he wore a dandy mustache. Lake, trees and volcanoes give this city a beautiful setting, but like Granada in old Spain, though not so picturesque, the glory has departed. Some few citizens are wealthy, but more are poor. In its prosperous day the lake was covered with commerce, all we saw on it were a few old tubs. Long eg) the wealth of precious metals and merchandise was brought in to Granada by trains of mules. Granada was founded by Co l d0l in 1523 and at one time was regarded as the wealthiest city In Central America. The buccaneers raided it in the seventeenth century, bagged its gold and sacked it in 1606. We looked in hovel huts and homes of abject squalor, The untidy women sat by sewing machines, surrounded by htte naked children, a litter of pigs and a lot of dogs. In one T00? we saw a horse with the family. Remember this is not out 1-l the c0m1try, under a thatched roof...
